THE DREYFUS CASE.

DURING a year which has seen some of the greatest changes of history, the most wonderful thing is the manner in which the sorrow of one man has drawn and held the sympathy of civilization. The interest in the case of Captain Dreyfus is almost without a parallel in his, and bids fair to continue as strong as ever for several months at least. The interest which the American people take in Captian Dreyfus is shown by the fact that the first edition of his letters to his wife was sold out almost on the day of publication. No one had thought that a book of this character would meet with such unusual and immediate success, and the increasing demand for it is in the nature of a surprise. One might think that a series of letters written in surroundings which gave not the slightest inspiration, and covering a period of more than three years, might become monotonous. Instead. any one who has followed the tragic story through the newspapers of the last four years will find this last chapter more interesting than all that have gone before. The devotion and faith to his wife, and the determination to live for her sake expressed in them, are sublime.

A NOTED WOMAN.

ELIZABETH CADY STANTON, at the age of 83, is as keen of intellect, as eloquent with the pen, as brimful of humor as she was fifty years ago, when her strong, fearless and progressive utterances on the platform and her wonderful state papers gave the world new knowledge of the intellectual possibilities of woman. She lives with a bachelor son, and widowed daughter, in a handsome flat overlooking the Hudson, and commanding a birds-eye view of Grant's Tomb, Columbia University and other interesting points in New York. ## THE LOCAL NEWSPAPER.

ONE contemporary, the Akron Beacon, said last week that "the local newspaper is probably abused more than any other person or thing, abused for what it does and for what it does not do, and vet all men must sooner or later acknowledge its power and usefulness. It is expected to give free more of what represents money to it than any other institution gives of its means or stock in trade, and more frequently than not gets curses because it does not do more."

The late Judge David Davis, of the United States supreme court, expressed this opinion after he had won his highest honors: "Each year every local paper gives from $500 to $5,000 in free lines for the benefit of the community in which it is located. No other paper can, or will, do this. The editor, in proportion to his means, does more for his town than any other man, and with all his fairness, man with man, he ought to be supported, day newspaper, are giving a High not because you may like him or admire his writing, but because a local newspaper is the best advertisement a community can have. It may not be crowded with great thoughts, but financially it is more of a benefit than both preacher and teacher. Today the editors of local papers do more for less than any other men on earth. Patronize your local paper, not as charity but as an investment."-Medina Gazette.
